Indeed, as far as the national committee went, there was not a vote recorded against Mr. Fairbanks, his selection being by acclamation this afternoon. The Terre Haute contingent, after being closeted with Gen. Lew Wallace for a considerable time in the morning, concluded that it was best to drop what promised to be another Indiana famturning leaves Michigan City 6:30 p. m. ily quarrel. It was the opinion of the Visit the Penitentiary, and take a ride Crawfordsville sage that this was the only wise course. General Wallace thought the national committee might have turned to one other than a senatorial candidate if it deemed it advisable to bestow the honor on Indiana, but he was unwilling to say that this disapproval should mean a fight So when the committee met this afternoon in its big room that reeks with tobacco half of "Uncle Dick" Thompson's appeal, secrecy as to the discussions being placed on the members. Mr. Fairbanks, I added, had not in any sense been a candidate for the honor and the committee had not contemplated advancing any senatorial candidate's interests in choosing him. Mr. Fairbanks had already been notified by the committee that he would be selected. in order that he might have sufficient time to prepare his speech. The committee fully agreed with me, and Mr. Fairbanks was elected by acclamation. All except about eight members of the committee were present. And I want to say, you Indiana folks have a mighty fine man in Mr. Fairbanks."

Then Mr. DeYoung wert back into the committee room to wrestle with the almost interminable contests carried on by the Southern delegates. A few minutes later word came out that Robert S. Hatcher, of Indiana, had been chosen as principal reading clerk of the convention. That young man was waiting in the hallway when the announcement was made.

Mr. Gowdy Has an Unsatisfactory Interview with General Wallace. pecial to the Indianapolis Journal.

ST. LOUIS, June 13.-There was much rossip among the Indiana delegates this morning about an interview between Gen. Lew Wallace and Chairman Gowdy, of the Indiana State committee, last night, in which the distinguished author and states-

Watson and I called on General Wallace the national committee at the Minneapolis | trict?" convention had asked me to name members of the resolutions and credentials committees before the delegates arrived. If I remember rightly, I named Hiram Brownlee on the credentials committee and Charles F. Griffin on the resolutions committee. I cited this incident of the Minneapolis convention and told General Wallace that if the committee asked me to name members of these two committees at this convention I wished to present his name from Indiana for the committee on resolutions. I did not make this offer with any but the best of motives, intending it as an honor to General Wallace. He did not seem to take kindly to what I said, although I prefaced my remarks by recalling the procedure at Minneapolis. I did not assume to act for the Indiana delegation, but had in mind solely the possibility of the national committee calling on me to name the men, as was the case at the Minneapolis convention. General Wallace grew very warm and said that the national committee had no right to delegate any such authority. If the Indiana delegates wanted him to go on the resolutions committee he would be glad to serve, but he didn't propose to accept such an appointment from the national committee or from any delegated authority other than the Indianians themselves. Wasn't that about what he said?" and Mr. Gowdy turned to Representative Watson, who had accompanied him in the call on General Wal-

"Yes," replied Mr. Watson, "only he made it much stronger and was very hot about the matter. We intended to show to him the plank which was agreed on at the conference held yesterday afternoon, but went away without doing so. As far as I am concerned, I don't think he ever will see it. It was in the most kindly spirit that we went to General Wallace."

It is not probable that Mr. Gowdy will lend any of his influence now towards the General Wallace for a gold standard. Mr. Gowdy wants the Indiana plank.

KERCHEVAL IN LUCK. Appointed Chief of Staff of Ushers by Marshal Wiswell.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. ST. LOUIS, June 13 .- Samuel Kercheval, member of the Republican State committee from the Evansville district, was all smiles this morning as he marched up and down in the lobby of the Southern Hotel behind a good cigar. Occasionally some Indiana friend would dig him under the ribs in glee and now and then would slap him on the back, for the news had traveled that Mr. Kercheval had just fallen into a position to do the folks from Indiana a great deal of good on convention days. Mr. Kercheval had run across George Wiswell, United States marshal for the Milwaukee (Wis.) district under President Harrison's administration, and after a warm exchange of greetings Mr. Wiswell informed the Indinaa men that Milwaukee had been honored by Sergeant-at-arms Byrnes. Mr. Wiswell was to have charge, under Mr. Byrnes, of the ushers, doorkeepers, sergeants-atarms and other functionaries of the convention-in fact, was to be Mr. Byrnes's in his grandfather's time. Ex-President Harrison's summer home in the section of the mountains which h caused to achieve considerable notoriety last summer, will be the handsomest between Saranac and Old Forge. It will cost more than $4,000 when finished. Plans have been prepared for the camp and other buildings, and work has been begun on the foundation. The cottage, or camp, as it is called, will stand a short distance from Indian Point, which is near the head of First lake, Last summer General Harrison occupied the Dodd camp, which is further back from the main land. Where he is building is considered by guides and woodsmen to be the best on the Fulton chain of lakes. All of the buildings will be made from logs, hewn flat on two sides and locked at the corners by regular log house joints. The eabin will have a frontage of forty-eight feet and a depth of thirty-four feet. The main living room will be sixteen by thirtytwo feet, with a ceiling twenty-three feet high in the center. A fire place, built of rough bowlders, fitted into place without cutting, will be one of the features of the room, and an extreme novelty to the inhabitants of the section of the Adirondacks where the General will spend his summers hereafter. The two towers, which are also a novelty in Adirondack cottages, will have sleeping rooms. The dining building will be twenty-two by forty feet, the first story of logs and the second story of shingles. Besides the large dining room, the building will contain a room for the guests, a pantry, kitchen and six sleeping rooms. About thirty feet from the main building, near the edge of the lake, will be the boat house. The sides will be shingles and the roof gabled. In the second story will be three rooms for the use of guests. The buildings will be spread out over six lots, which have been cleared of underbrush and other forest material, Contractor John H. Nelson, of Herkimar, is now at work on the camp, and expects to have it in readiness for the General when he reaches Old Forge with his bride in the early part of July.

I met Mr. Depew at the Southern Hotel this afternoon and he told me he had received the telegram, the last words of which are "This is final." This leaves New York without a Vice Presidential candidate and makes Chauncey M. Depew a possibility, if he will take it. I asked him pointblank to-day whether he was a candidate for the vice presidency. He replied: "If I were a candidate for the vice presidency I could not consistently present Governor Morton's name to the convention as a candidate for the nomination for President. I think that answers your ques-

"It does in a way, Mr. Depew," said L. 'But Governor Morton's defeat is a foregone conclusion. You know he cannot be nominated and, besides, in the conventions of the past, men who have made speeches have accepted nominations. Take the case of Garfield, for instance. I don't want to insinuate that I suppose you have any thought of treachery to Governor Morton, but I don't think that the present situation bars you from being a candidate."

"I think," replied Mr. Depew, "such a proceedure on my part would be fully as bad as what has been charged of Garfield. I don't think Garfield was treacherous, you understand.. At any rate, I am not a candidate for the vice presi-I had this chat with Mr. Depew just as he was going to his dinner. He is looking well and he will probably make one of the greatest speeches of the convention. His speech will not be a long one. He once told me that the platform orator of to-day who spoke for more than one hour at a time was a fool and that no after-dinner speech should ever last over forty minutes. Chauncey Depew looks more like a preacher than a clubman or rallroad president. His hair and side whiskers are as white as frosted silver. His eyes are blue as the skips of Greece and his smile is as sweet as that of a baby. When you see him on the platform his cultured. clerical face makes you wonder if he bas not just stepped out of the pulpit and whether, after all, it is not a mistale, and that he is not just about to ask grace. You change your opinion when he begins to talk. His voice is strong, but pleasant. He does not tear the air, nor do his tones cut into your nerves like a buzz saw. His words come freely and naturally. He tells many stories, but always to the point, and you find that his talk is full of ideas as well as wit. I understood he has written out the speech which he will make to the convention, He often dictates matters of this kind and then goes over it before he meets his audience. The dictation clarifies his thought and though he does not make the same speech perhaps that he has dictated the thought is the same, only better expressed. Chauncey Depew was a candidate for the nomination for President in 1888, He had a number of votes from New York and at one time it looked as though New Jersey was going to vote for him. He had ninety-nine votes on the first ballot, and Frank Hiscock presented his name. It was soon seen, however, that New York was not serious in pushing his candidacy and his name was withdrawn. Chauncey Depew then wanted to see Sherman nominated, and I am told that John Sherman certainly would have been President had it not been for Tom Platt. Chauncey Depew gave a dinner to the New York delegation one night during the convention, and at that dinner it was agreed that the delegates at large of New York should cast the vote of the entire delegation. The four delegates at large were Warner Miller, Frank Hiscock, Tom Platt and Chauncey M. Depew. Miller, Depew and Hiscock were Sherman men and Platt pretended that he was for either

Sherman or Harrison. Platt saw the Ohio men and they promised him that Sherman would give him what he wanted if he cast New York's vote in the right way. They warned him that the other candidates, t
